

IMPORTANT INFORMATION REGARDING MGN-3

We are now recommending ImmPower in place of MGN-3. We will continue to offer MGN-3, but we believe ImmPower is a better choice. ImmPower is similar to MGN-3 in that it employs mushroom extracts in combination with rice bran. ImmPower contains 3 mushroom extracts; whereas, MGN-3 contains 1.

The research lists similar effects on the immune system including significant increases in NK cell and T Cell activity, increases in interferon production and modulation of cytokines. The difference is the quantity and quality of the research.

The MGN-3 research involved only 72 human patients. Also, none of the research studies have been published in major peer-reviewed medical journals.

There is a vast amount of research on ImmPower from various medical facilities over a period of 15 plus years. There have been 29 published research articles involving over 300 human participants including 10 in peer-reviewed journals. More than 200 patients in the studies have shown improvement.

ImmPower is considerably less expensive. The cost of ImmPower is about 1/3 the cost of MGN-3.

Finally, we want to let all of our customer know about the legal action taken against Lane Labs, the manufacturer of MGN-3. Both the FTC and the FDA have taken action against this company. The FDA has charged Lane Labs with unlawfully promoting and marketing three of their products, including MGN3 as a treatment for cancer and HIV.
